

MBTI® for Teachers

You already know that the human brain is a very complex piece of equipment. You also know that there are many makes and models out there. What if you were able to increase your knowledge and use this understanding to make your teaching even more effective?

In this workshop you will discover your own personality type and those of your colleagues. Understanding your own type and increasing your awareness of how people use these preferences is invaluable for the world of education. We look at how psychological type (Jung) affects both teaching and learning styles, giving you new information and ideas for lesson planning and content delivery. The MBTI® is also an ideal training tool to help develop both your SMT and your staff mentors.

The MBTI® is the world's most widely used personality questionnaire and is based on the work of psychologist Carl Jung and his theory of opposites. It is not a test - it indicates your clarity for a set of preferences we all have and use. We will look at:

1. the differences in how people are energised and interact with the world
2. the differences in the way people prefer to take in information
3. the differences in how people prefer to use that information
4. how these preferences effect structure and order in our outside world.

Why Invest?

- Understand your strengths as a staff team and identify opportunities for change and development
- Develop your flexibility to be able to communicate with a wider range of personality styles
- Structure learning that appeals to all personality preferences
- Assist learners to develop their non-preferred sides and aid their development in becoming well-rounded, flexible and adaptable.

Syllabus:

- What is the MBTI®
- The four dichotomies/8 preferences
- Completion of the MBTI®
- What this means for me
- What this means for us
- Psychological type & teaching styles
- Psychological type & learning styles
- Problem-solving using the MBTI
- Lesson planning using the MBTI®

Who is it for?

- NQT's & RQT's
- Established Teachers
- Teaching Assistants & Support Staff
- Senior Management & Leadership Teams

How much?

Workshop prices vary on how long you have to invest in your staff. Contact us to discuss your exact needs.

Dates & Locations:

You decide! We deliver programmes nationwide. This is typically a one day programme that can be delivered at your school or at a venue of your choice. We tailor our courses to suit your exact needs. We can also deliver this programme over twilight sessions.

Developing
Potential (UK)

0800 043 5730

www.developing-potential.co.uk