

The MBTI®

You already know that we are all so very different and that these differences impact on your business performance. Personality is not, however, something that we can switch off and leave at home. Our personality is a fundamental part of who we are. It is with us always, whether we are at home or at work.

Truly acknowledging, understanding and working with personality difference is definitely one way in which you can achieve high performance and more effective team working.

Unlike many other psychometric tools, the MBTI® is not a test. Instead, it indicates a person's clarity for a set of preferences. Understanding both your own and your team's Type's (or preferences) can help in a number of ways, not least by improving communication, resolving conflict and identifying areas for team and personal development.

The MBTI® is part of all Leadership Training programmes. It can also be administered to enhance our Team Development and Outdoor Management Development programmes or as a stand alone course for individuals or groups.

We also provide online administration and telephone feedback for individuals wanting to take the MBTI®.
